Why Making Friends?

Imagine you're travelling to Britain on holiday or for business reasons. Or perhaps you're going to work there or in another English-speaking country for a short time? You want to meet and get to know people while you're there. Perhaps you learnt English at school but that was some time ago. What you really need now is a guide to some simple, up-to-date English phrases that are going to help you make friends and maybe more ... The Penguin Quick Guide to Making Friends in English is just the book for you.

What's in this book?

This book contains over 50 different conversations that will be useful from the moment you step off the plane until you leave the country again. Obviously, no conversation is going to sound exactly the same as the ones in this book, and you will no doubt think of other ways of expressing the same idea. But we hope that the conversations in this book show you the simplest and most effective ways of saying things.

How is the book organised?

The book is divided into ten chapters covering familiar situations from different angles. Essential language – in other words, key sentences and questions – are highlighted in short conversations and sometimes accompanied by cultural or language notes. These notes are indicated by this symbol.

The Review page at the end of each chapter tests your understanding. Answers to these questions are in the Answers section at the back of the book. The essential language is also listed in the Index. There is space under each entry for you to write the sentences in your own language. Read the notes on page 128 for guidance on using the Index.

Why is this book called a Quick Guide?

- It's short and guides you quickly to the most important language you will need for making friends.
- It's small enough to carry around with you.
- It's quick and easy to learn.

How do I use the book?

- Either read the book from start to finish or select a relevant chapter. For example, you may want to go straight to the chapter called The invitation, which presents useful language for inviting someone out, suggesting where to go and arranging to meet. Read the chapter. Why not practise the conversations aloud with a friend?
- Do the exercises in the Review at the end of the chapter. Then go to the Answers section at the back. Were you right?
- Try out the language as soon as you get a chance. It doesn't matter if you make mistakes or your pronunciation isn't perfect.

If you don't say anything at all, you'll never make any friends!

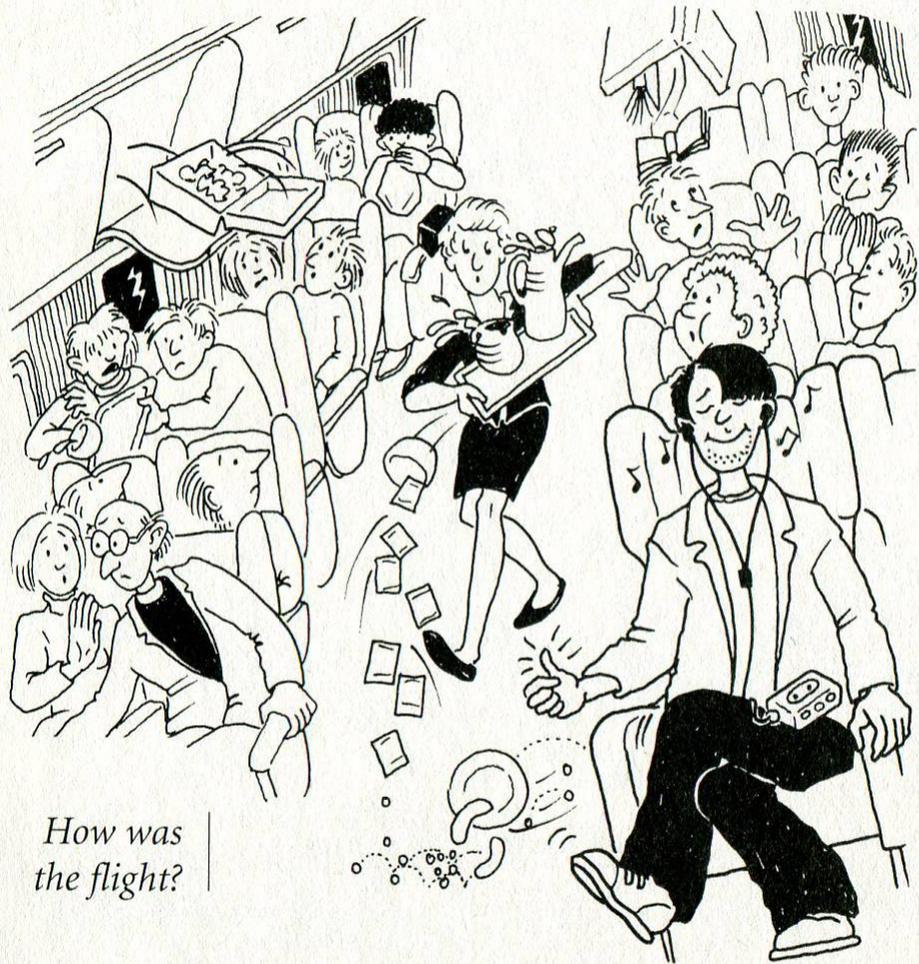

So, open the book now, read, and try to use the language as soon as you can. I hope you make a lot of good friends through English. Good luck!

Arrival

Your journey

How was the flight?

MARK: Hi, Raúl! Sorry we're late! Have you been waiting long?

RAUL: No, I've only just come through.

MARK: How was the flight?

RAUL: OK. A bit bumpy but not too bad.

MARK: This is my sister Emma.

RAUL: Hello, Emma.

EMMA: Hi. Good journey?

RAUL: Yes, fine, thanks.

MARK: Did you get any food on the flight?

RAUL: Yes, thanks. We got a cold meal.

MARK: Oh good. Right. Shall we go?

When you arrive in Britain, people will ask you questions about your journey, your visit, your knowledge of English, and probably something about your country. Be prepared!

Your visit

EMMA: Is this your first time in London?

RAUL: No, I've been here once before but only for a few days.

EMMA: How long are you staying here?

RAUL: About three months altogether.

EMMA: Are you working here or are you on holiday?

RAUL: I've got a part-time job in a tapas bar in West London.

EMMA: Where are you staying? With Mark?

RAUL: Yes, I'm using his spare room.

EMMA: Bad luck! It's about the size of a dog kennel!

Are you working here or are you on holiday?

Your English

Don't worry about making mistakes when you speak to English people. They probably don't speak your language very well!

EMMA: Where did you learn your English?

RAUL: Mainly at school.

EMMA: How long have you studied it?

RAUL: About six years. But I know I still do mistakes.

EMMA: Do you want people to correct you?

RAUL: Of course.

EMMA: Well, we say I make mistakes not I do mistakes.

RAUL: Oh, right. Thanks. English grammar is impossible!

EMMA: Are you going to English classes while you're here?

RAUL: No, I'm too lazy!

Your country

EMMA: Where do you come from in Spain?

RAUL: Well, at the moment I'm living in Madrid but my home town is Segovia.

EMMA: My geography is very bad. Where's that in relation to Madrid?

RAUL: It's about 50 kilometres north of the city.

EMMA: What's Segovia like? Is it famous for anything?

RAUL: It's nice, not too big. But we get a lot of tourists because it's a historical town.

EMMA: When did you move to Madrid?

RAUL: About a year ago. I got a job there.

Sorry, where exactly is Spain?

Most British people are not very good at geography. They may know where your capital city is, but not much more than that.

- 2 From a town on the north-east coast. A few kilometres north of Barcelona.
- 3 English? For eight years altogether.

Have you met ...?

Hot tips!

How to greet people for the first time When you meet someone of your own age for the first time, you can either shake hands or simply nod your head and smile. It is unusual for British people to kiss or slap each other on the back when they first meet.

Names in introductions It is common to use first names only if the situation is informal. When you are introduced to someone, try to listen to the name. If necessary, ask for repetition: Sorry, I didn't quite catch that. What's your name again? can be quite a good way to start a conversation.

Conversational clues When people introduce another person, they will often add a sentence to describe that person: Meet John. John's in computers or John and I used to go to school together. This can give you a clue for continuing the conversation, e.g. Oh yes, what sort of computer work do you do? or Where was the school?

Most British men are not very happy about kissing other men.

Introducing yourself

LUCY: Hello. I don't think we've met.

RAUL: No, we haven't. I'm Raúl, Mark's friend from Spain.

LUCY: Hi! My name's Lucy. I'm a friend of Mark's from work.

RAUL: Oh right. Nice to meet you.

SIMON: Hello. I'm Simon, Mark's flatmate. You must be Raúl.

RAUL: That's right. Hi. It seems a really nice flat.

It seems a really nice flat.

Introducing friends

Sam, this is Raúl.

MARK: Raúl, come with me and I'll introduce you to a few people.

RAUL: OK.

MARK: Have you met Lucy?

LUCY: Yes, we've already met.

MARK: OK, in that case, meet Sam. Sam and I were at college together. Sam, this is Raúl. Raúl's a mate of mine from Spain.

SAM: Hi, Raúl. I was just having a word with Emma. Do you know Emma, Mark's sister? Emma ... Raúl.

RAUL: Yes, we met at the airport. Hi Emma!

Formal introductions

MAN: Tom, have you met Sue Maynard, our sales manager?

TOM: I don't think so, no.

MAN: Then let me introduce you. Sue, this is Tom Brooks, from IBC Rome.

TOM: How do you do.

SUE: How do you do. Pleased to meet you.
When did you arrive?

Formal introductions In formal situations, shake hands, smile and say: How do you do. You do not need to add Mr/Mrs/Miss and the surname. If you meet the person again, just say Hello. There is no need to shake hands again.

Handling unusual names

MARK: Dede, come and talk to Raúl. It's his first day in London.

DEDE: Sorry, what's your name again?

RAUL: Raúl.

DEDE: Can you say it once again?

RAUL: (slowly) Ra ... úl. It's a Spanish name. And your name is ... ?

DEDE: Dede. It's short for Deirdre.

RAUL: (slowly) Deirdre. How do you spell that?

DEDE: D-E-I-R-D-R-E.

RAUL: That's too hard for me. Dede is much easier!

A few rules

Making new friends is never easy, especially in a foreign city. But occasionally an opportunity arises to say a few words to a stranger and this can sometimes lead on to a pleasant conversation. Before you start chatting, there are a few rules.

Is this seat free?

Where to sit If you get on a bus, tube or train, don't sit next to a stranger, however pleasant he or she may look, if there is a free seat somewhere else. Choosing a seat next to someone is only acceptable if the bus or train is full. The same goes for when you are in a café. Don't sit next to or opposite someone if another table is free. It can appear threatening.

How close to stand When you talk to a stranger, don't stand or put your face too close. You should try and keep at least 50 cm between you.

In a café

WOMAN 1: Excuse me, is this seat free?

WOMAN 2: Sure.

WOMAN 1: Thanks. Do you think you could pass the sugar?

WOMAN 2: Of course.

WOMAN 1: Thanks. What's the food like here?

WOMAN 2: It's OK. The salads and sandwiches aren't bad and the chips are always good.

WOMAN 1: Are there any other good places to eat round here?

WOMAN 2: It depends. What sort of food do you like?

On a plane

Are you on business or is it a holiday?

WOMAN: Here comes our lunch. It looks very dull, doesn't it?

MAN: Yes, it's typical airline food.

WOMAN: Are you going to London on business or is it a holiday?

MAN: Neither. I live there. I'm just returning from a business trip.

WOMAN: Oh right. What sort of work do you do?

Later ...

WOMAN: Can you tell me ... what's the best way of getting to the centre of London from the airport?

MAN: Well, there are a number of ways. Where do you actually want to go?

At a bus stop

RAUL: Does the number 9 stop here?

WOMAN: Yes, I'm waiting for one myself.

RAUL: Does it go as far as Marble Arch?

WOMAN: Yes, it goes all the way to Piccadilly.

RAUL: There's quite a queue! Have you been here long?

WOMAN: About five minutes. Here's one now.

RAUL: Could you tell me when we get to Marble Arch?

WOMAN: Of course. Is this your first time in London?

The British love a good queue.

In a pub or bar

Can I buy you a drink?

SIMON: Busy, isn't it?

MAN: Terrible. It's Friday night, that's why. You can hardly move after nine thirty.

SIMON: Do they sell food in here?

MAN: No, but there's a good café around the corner.

SIMON: Oh right. Thanks. Is this your local?

MAN: Not really, I just quite like the place.

BARMAN: Yes, sir?

SIMON: A pint of lager please. Kronenburg if you've got it. Can I buy you a drink?

MAN: Oh, thanks. I'll have the same again, please. Just a half.

SIMON: So, do you live round here?

Opening lines

Starting conversations with strangers isn't the easiest thing in the world. There are no clear rules, but if you look back at the previous conversations, you will notice that most of the time people do one or other of these:

Ask for information

Does this bus go as far as Marble Arch?
Do they sell sandwiches in here?

Ask for help

Could you tell me when we get to Marble Arch?

Make a request

Do you think you could pass the sugar?

Ask for an opinion

What's the food like?

Ask a personal question (but not too personal!)

Do you live round here?

Make an offer or invitation

Can I get you another drink?

Make a comment

It looks very dull, doesn't it? Busy, isn't it?

If a stranger makes a comment about something we often use a similar, stronger adjective to agree:

A: Busy, isn't it? – B: Terrible!

A: Lovely day, isn't it? – B: Brilliant!

A: Big, isn't it? – B: Massive!

The art of conversation

Open questions

For easier conversation, use 'open' questions starting with What? Where? When? Who? Why? How? rather than closed questions which require only a yes/no answer. Or start with the phrase: Tell me ... Then the other person can answer in any way they want.

Who ... ?!
What ... ?!
When ... ?!
How ... ?!

MARK: What sort of pizza do you prefer?

LUCY: I like American Hot best.

RAUL: How do you get to work?

SIMON: I usually take the tube and then walk.

EMMA: Where did you buy your jacket?

LUCY: I don't know. It was a present from my boyfriend.

SIMON: Tell me how you met Mark.

RAUL: That's a long story. It was about two years ago when I was ...

Showing interest

I don't think I'm built for skiing.

Think of someone you know who is good at making conversation. Notice how they show interest in what the other person is saying. How do they do it?

By making a remark Really? How awful! That's interesting!

MAN: I don't think I'm built for skiing.

WOMAN: Really?

By making a remark and then asking a further question

MAN: I'm going walking in the Himalayas.

WOMAN: That sounds exciting. Are you going on your own?

By using a short question Did you? Are you?

WOMAN: I broke my arm when I was six.

MAN: Did you? How did you do that?

By repeating the last or most important words

WOMAN: I've just bought four pairs of jeans.

MAN: Four!

Checking

Turn left at the lights, then right, then right again, then third left, over the bridge, then right at the lights and it's on your right. Can't miss it. OK?

We use checking language to make sure that the other person has understood us. This can be a one-word check question, e.g. Right? OK? or a fuller question, e.g. Do you follow me? or Are you with me? or Do you know what I mean?

MARK: I'll see you outside the cinema. Right?

LUCY: OK. What time?

SIMON: I'll get some more coffee when I go out.
Yeah?

MARK: Sure. Do you want some money?

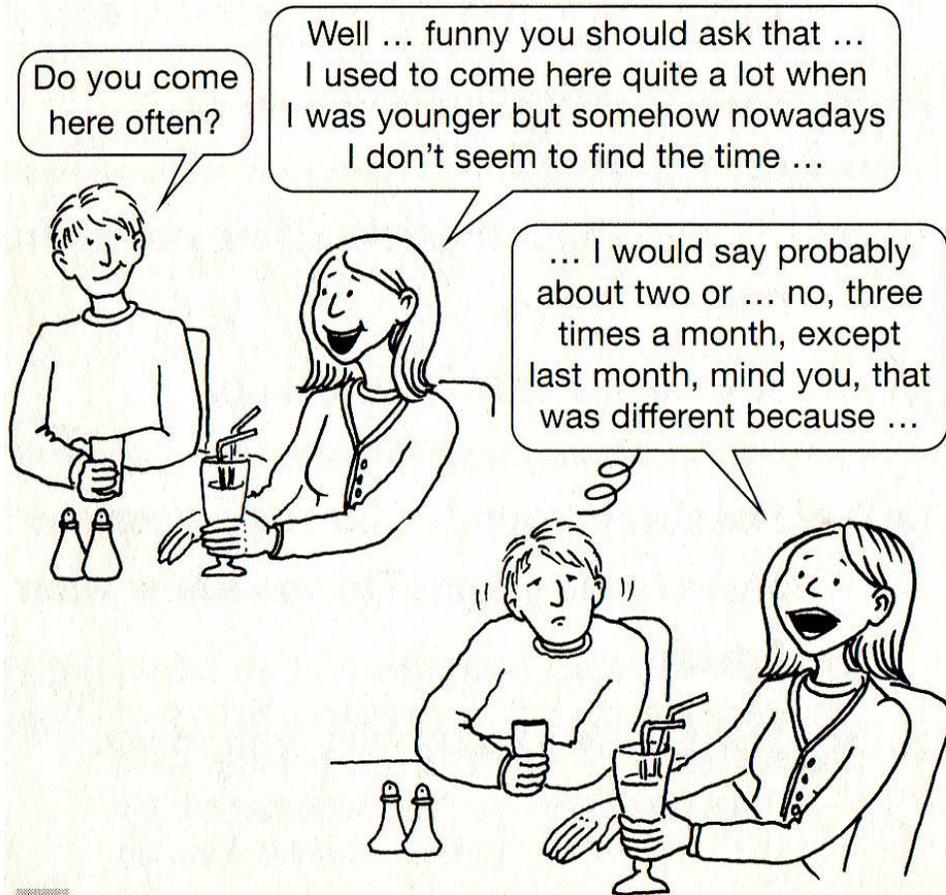

MARK: I'll ring about the tickets this afternoon.
OK?

RAUL: Yes, thanks. Any seats will do.

EMMA: She always sounds a bit rude when she answers the phone. Do you know what I mean?

LUCY: Yes, I know exactly what you mean.

Expanding your answer

If someone asks you a question, even if it is a closed question, try not to answer with just yes or no. It sounds much friendlier if you can expand your answer and give a bit more information. This gives the other speaker an idea of what to say next.

WOMAN: Do you like this sort of music?

MAN: Yes, I've always liked modern jazz.

MAN: Do you live round here?

WOMAN: Yes, I've got a flat at the top end of North Street.

BOY: Do you want some more pasta?

GIRL: No, thanks. I've had more than enough already.

GIRL: Did my father phone?

WOMAN: No, nobody's phoned all evening.

Telling jokes and stories

Telling a joke successfully

- 1 Introduce your stories with a suitable phrase:
Do you want to hear a joke?
Have you heard the one about ...
That reminds me of a joke about ...
- 2 When you tell a joke with a story line, use the present tense. It sounds more natural.
- 3 Don't tell a joke if your English isn't good enough!
- 4 Don't choose a very long joke.
- 5 Don't laugh at the punch line (the last line) before you say it.

Now I am thinking I will tell a ... what is the word, a good story that you will laugh, a yock? Sorry, a joke, in English, if this is all right, yes?

Don't tell a joke if your English isn't good enough.

That reminds me ...

MARK: Do you want to hear a stupid elephant joke?

SIMON: Go on.

MARK: How does an elephant get down from a tree?

SIMON: I don't know. How does an elephant get down from a tree?

MARK: He sits on a leaf and waits for autumn!

SIMON: That's terrible! But this one's even worse. Have you heard the one about the man who drove his car into a lake?

MARK: No?

SIMON: He was trying to dip his headlights.

MARK: Ow! That reminds me of another one.

An English farmer is visiting his American cousin, who is also a farmer, in Texas. The Texan farmer is boasting about his farm. 'My farm is so big that it takes me a whole day to drive around it,' he says. The Englishman looks at his cousin and replies, 'Yes, I know what you mean. I used to have a car like that too.'

| 3 My dad's just given me £100. | c) How awful!                                 |
| 4 I'm off to Canada next week. | d) Really? That's an unusual job for a woman. |

Party
time

5

Great party!

The food is excellent!

MARK: Hi, Sam. Great party!

SAM: Thanks.

MARK: I like this music.

SAM: It's good, isn't it? How are you all doing? Is everything OK?

MARK: Fine. This food is excellent, by the way. But what are the white things?

SAM: Ask Raúl – he brought them.

RAUL: It lives in the sea ... with eight legs ....

CLARE: You mean octopus?

RAUL: That's right. Try some – they're really good!

Timing Unless you are asked to come at a specific time, informal parties usually start quite late. Some people don't arrive until the pubs shut at around 11 pm. Parties are likely to go on until the small hours.

Who knows who?

GIRL: Do you know everybody here?

RAUL: No, I don't. Hardly anybody.

GIRL: How do you know Sam?

RAUL: He's a friend of Mark's. How about you?

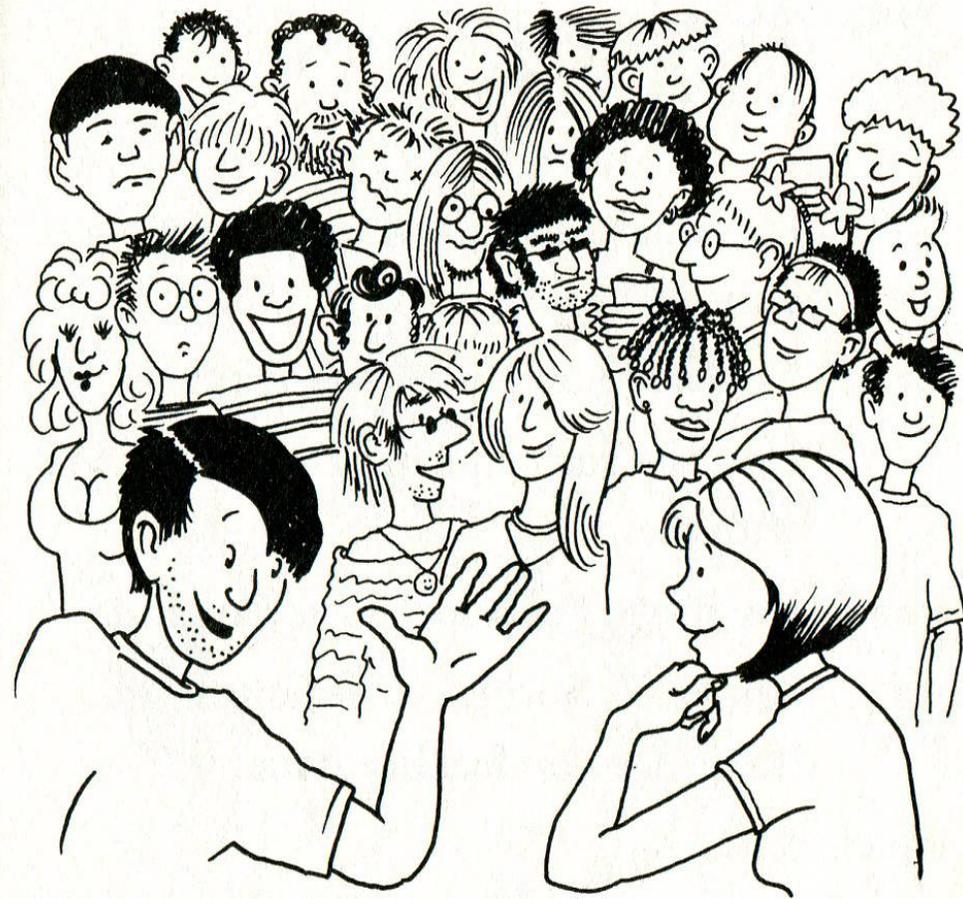

GIRL: Sam and I go to the same gym.

RAUL: He's a nice guy. How long have you known him?

GIRL: About a year or so.

RAUL: Who else do you know here?

GIRL: Well, that's Sam's girlfriend, Clare ...

Do you know everybody here?

Dancing

LUCY: I love this song. Shall we go and dance?

MARK: No, you know I don't like dancing.

LUCY: Don't be such a pain! Come on, dance with me!

MARK: No, really. I'm hopeless at dancing.

LUCY: You are so boring! What about you, Raúl? Do you feel like dancing?

RAUL: Sure.

 Bringing a bottle Most people expect you to bring a bottle if they invite you to a party. You don't need to bring a gift unless it's a special occasion such as a birthday party.

The English are well-known for their dancing skills.

Leaving the party

Can I take your number?

Transport In London and other big cities, tube trains run late but not all night; night buses run all through the night along popular routes. London taxis (sometimes called black cabs) are licensed and are safer and more reliable than mini-cabs. They are not always more expensive.

LUCY: It's getting late. What time is the last tube, Sam?

SAM: I think it's gone.

LUCY: Are there any night buses?

SAM: I'm not sure. Sorry.

LUCY: Do you mind if I use your phone to call a taxi?

SAM: Go ahead.

RAUL: Are you leaving already, Lucy?

LUCY: Yes, I'm afraid I've got to go. I've got an early start tomorrow.

RAUL: Er ... Can I take your number?

LUCY: Sure, it's 0958 672234. It's my mobile.

RAUL: Great. I'll give you a ring sometime.

LUCY: Cool.

Saying thank you

Saying thank you Saying thanks for a party is usually a very casual affair among young people. If it's a good party, you might like to phone or send a short email afterwards to say how much you enjoyed it.

email to sally

Hi Sally

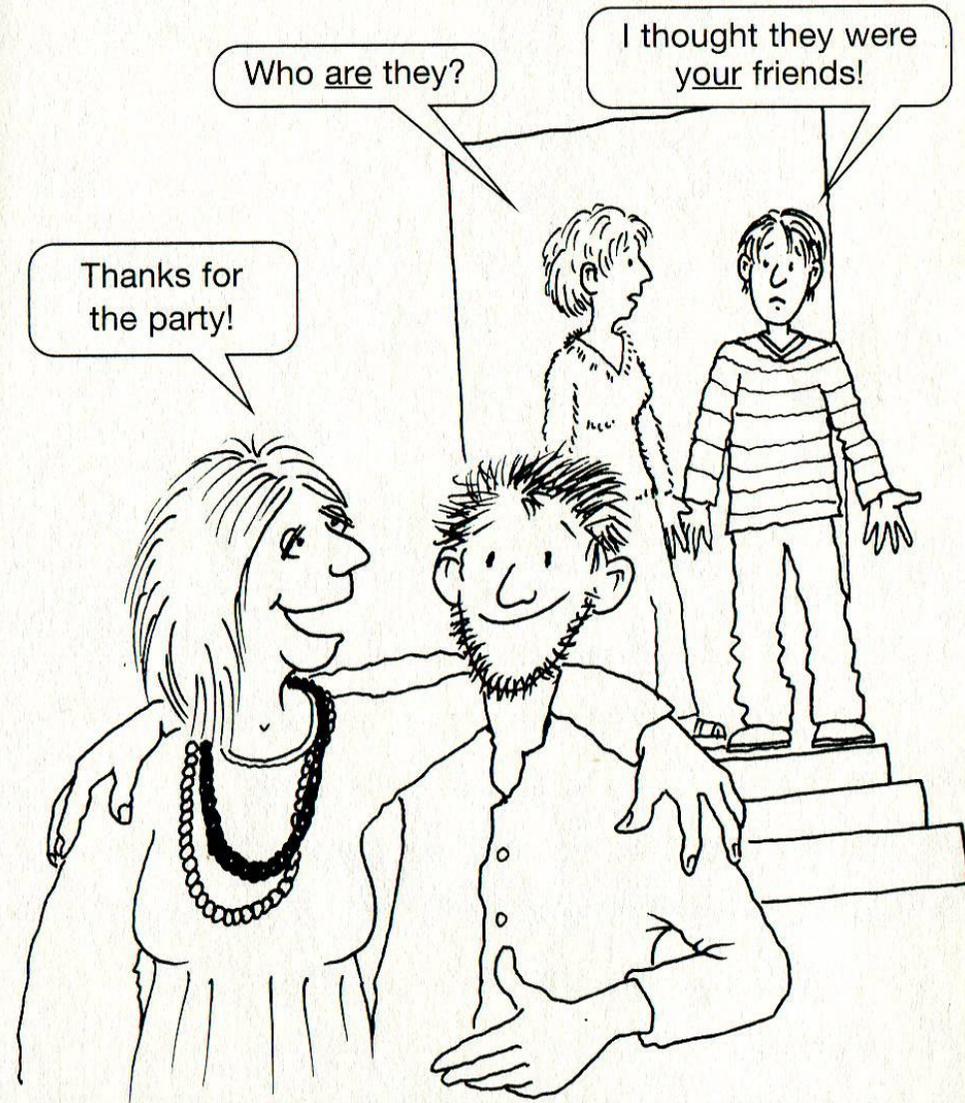

Hope you're feeling OK this morning!

Thanks for a great party – we had a really good time.

See you soon.

B Reorder the conversation. The first one is correct.

- 1 How do you know Sue, by the way?
- 2 So early! What's your name, by the way?
- 3 No, thanks. Do you feel like dancing?
- 4 That's a nice name. Can I take your number?
- 5 No, I'm hopeless at it. Anyway, I've got to go.
- 6 Sorry, I'm not on the phone. Bye!
- 7 Natalie.
- 8 We're friends from college. Another drink?

The invitation

Words of advice

If you invite someone out:

Make the first date quite casual: maybe a drink, lunch or perhaps the cinema. If the whole thing is a mistake, at least it won't last too long.

Be prepared to pay. When you get to know the other person better, you can agree to share the bill if you are both happy about it.

If someone invites you out:

Don't agree to go on a date if you don't want to. If the person presses you, say clearly that you are not interested. You don't want to get into an embarrassing situation later on.

Meet in a neutral place, outside your home, then if things go wrong, it is easier to walk away.

Perhaps this is a mistake?

Inviting and refusing

SIMON: Do you feel like going out this evening?

GIRL: I'm afraid I can't. I'm busy.

SIMON: Oh, right. What about Saturday night?

GIRL: Sorry, Saturday night's no good.

SIMON: Well, what evenings are you free next week?

GIRL: Next week is difficult.

SIMON: So when are you likely to be free?

GIRL: Sorry, but I'm just not interested.

Inviting and accepting

Are you doing anything this evening?

Er, no ... absolutely nothing.

RAUL: Lucy? It's Raúl here. Listen, er ... are you doing anything this evening?

LUCY: Raúl. It's you. Er ... no ... absolutely nothing.

RAUL: Well, do you feel like going to the cinema?

LUCY: Yeah. Great.

RAUL: What would you like to see?

LUCY: I'm not sure. There are quite a few good films on.

RAUL: Have you seen the new Brad Pitt film?

LUCY: No, is it good?

RAUL: It's supposed to be. Do you fancy seeing that?

LUCY: Yes, I'd love to. That would be really nice.

Suggestions

LUCY: Where shall we meet? Outside the cinema?

RAUL: Yes, we could, but the film doesn't start till nine. Why don't we meet a bit earlier and have a drink first?

LUCY: What time?

RAUL: What about meeting around eight outside Leicester Square station?

LUCY: OK. Let's do that.

But you said around eight o'clock, didn't you?

Definite times Let's meet ...

at eight (o'clock) at eight sharp at eight on the dot no earlier/later than eight

Approximate times Why don't we meet ...

(at) about eight (at) around eight a bit before eight sometime around eight at eightish

Final arrangements

RAUL: So, eight o'clock outside Leicester Square station?

LUCY: Sounds good. Have you got a mobile number in case I get held up at work?

RAUL: Yes, it's 0780 350 1289.

LUCY: Great. See you later on this evening.

RAUL: Yeah, I'm looking forward to it.

LUCY: Me too. Bye.

RAUL: Bye!

Complimenting

RAUL: Hi! You look great!

LUCY: Thanks.

RAUL: I like your jacket.

LUCY: It's fun, isn't it? My mum thinks it's a bit weird.

RAUL: I don't think so. That style suits you.

LUCY: You've got good taste, Raúl!

Oh Mum, that really suits you!

Offering

Popcorn is the most popular snack in cinemas everywhere.

RAUL: I'll queue up and get the tickets.

LUCY: Let me give you some money.

RAUL: No, don't worry. It's on me.

LUCY: Thanks.

RAUL: Would you like to sit in the middle or at the back?

LUCY: I don't mind. You choose. Do you fancy some popcorn, by the way?

RAUL: Yeah, that would be nice.

LUCY: I'll get us a carton each.

It's on me Other expressions for offering to pay are:
Let me pay. Allow me. I'll get this. This is my treat. It's my round (round = when you buy a drink for several people in a pub).

Exchanging opinions

LUCY: What did you think of the film?

RAUL: I thought it was pretty good.

LUCY: Yes, I did too. A bit sentimental, though.

RAUL: Oh, did you think so?

LUCY: Mm.

RAUL: I really liked the twist at the end.

LUCY: Oh come on! It was a bit obvious.

RAUL: Well, I wasn't expecting it ...

What did you think of it?

Ending the evening

It was good fun!

RAUL: Let me see you home.

LUCY: You don't have to.

RAUL: I know, but I'd like to. I really enjoyed this evening.

LUCY: Me too. It was good fun.

RAUL: Can I see you again?

LUCY: Sure.

RAUL: What about Friday evening?

LUCY: The day after tomorrow? Yes, I think I'm free.

RAUL: OK, I'll pick you up after work.

See you home means to accompany someone to their home either on foot or by public transport. It was good fun means that you enjoyed yourself and had a good time. It doesn't mean that you had a particularly amusing or funny time.

Excitement

EMMA: How was your date with Raúl last night?

LUCY: It was brilliant.

EMMA: Really?

LUCY : Yes, he's really good company and he's got these amazing eyes.

EMMA: When are you seeing him again?

LUCY : Tomorrow. I can't wait!

EMMA: I don't think Mark will be pleased.

Brilliant is often used today to mean very good. You can also use these words, which are acceptable anywhere: excellent fantastic amazing superb. Other words which are more colloquial, and used by young people, are: cool fab top ace wicked.

He's got these amazing eyes.

Sympathy

SIMON: What's the matter with you? You look a bit down.

MARK: I feel it.

SIMON: What's up?

MARK: It's Lucy. She's going out with Raúl.

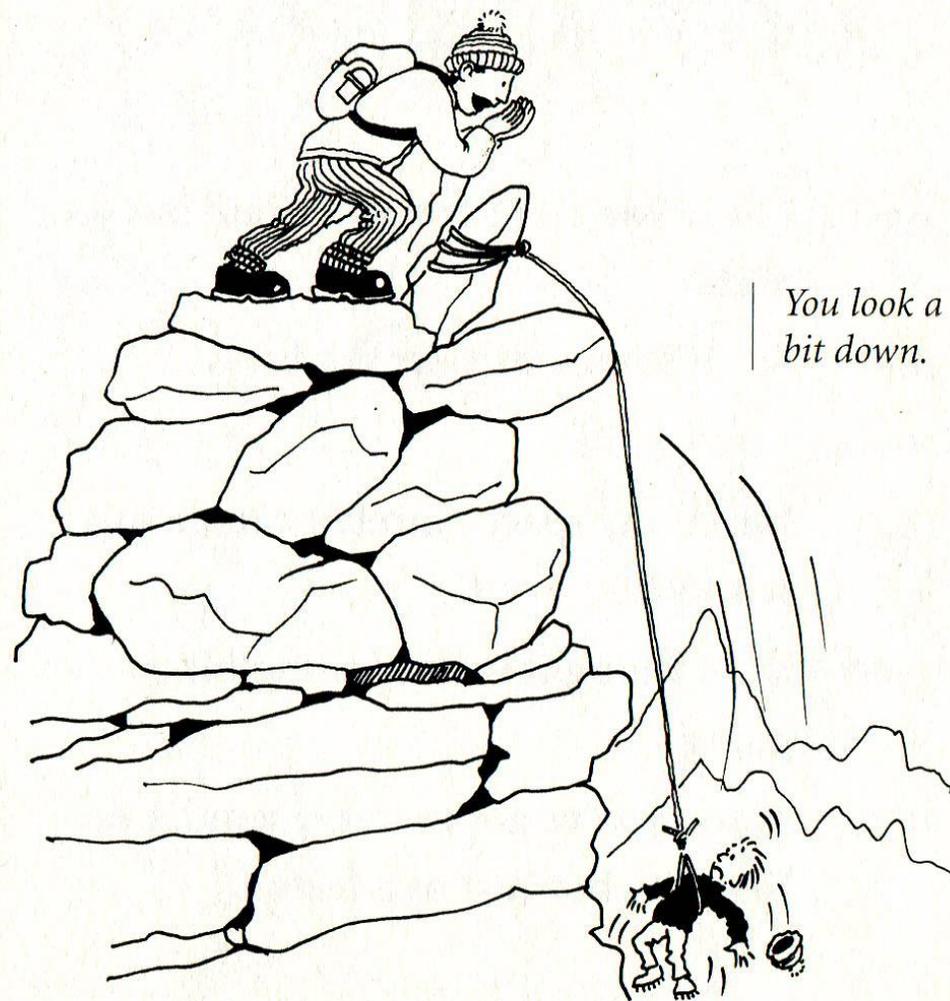

SIMON: With Raúl! Since when?

MARK: Since last night.

SIMON: You must be feeling pretty bad.

MARK: Yup.

 What's the matter? – other common alternatives are:
What's up? What is it? What's wrong? What's the problem?

You look a bit down.

Confrontation

MARK: I hear you went out with Raúl last night.

LUCY: So? It's none of your business.

MARK: I realise that.

LUCY: I need my space. Surely I can go out with who I want.

MARK: But I thought we had something going.

LUCY: Mark, you've got to understand. I do like you, but just as a friend.

She said she needed some space.

Apology

RAUL: Look, Mark, I'm sorry if I've upset you.

MARK: I thought you knew I liked Lucy.

RAUL: Yes, but I didn't realise you two were serious.

MARK: I see.

RAUL: Believe me, I'm really sorry.

MARK: OK.

RAUL: Look, I'll phone her and cancel our date tomorrow.

MARK: No, just leave it.

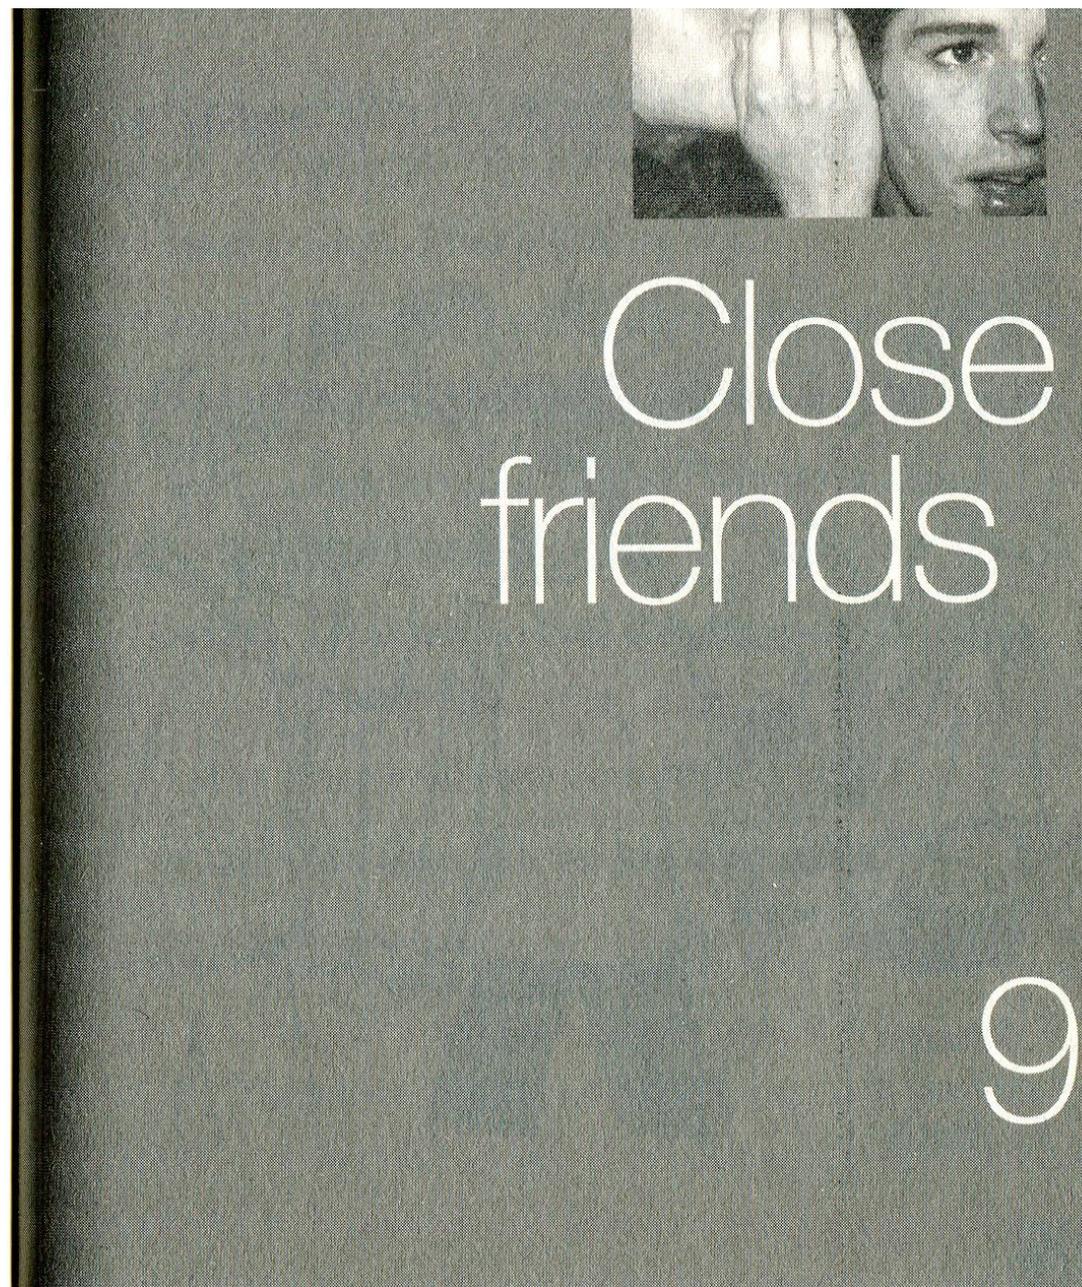

How sorry are you?

Last words

I'm going to miss you.

LUCY: I won't come to the airport. I hate saying goodbye. It's so hard when there are so many people around.

RAUL: I know what you mean. Here, I've got a little present for you.

LUCY: Oh Raúl. It's lovely. Thank you!

RAUL: I'm going to miss you. Will you write to me?

LUCY: Of course I will. You'll get tired of all my emails.

RAUL: No I won't. I'll be thinking of you all the time.

LUCY: Oh. I wish you didn't have to go!

Saying goodbye

RAUL: I'm off now. Mark's taking me to the airport.

EMMA: Oh Raúl, it's so sad that you're leaving!

SIMON: Yes, it won't be the same without you.
We've had some good times.

RAUL: Yes, it's been brilliant.

EMMA: Don't lose touch, will you?

RAUL: No, I won't. I'll send you an email now and then and keep you up to date.

SIMON: Come back and see us again soon.

RAUL: I will. And if you're ever in Madrid, give me a ring and we'll do something.

Saying thank you

*Thanks for the dinner, Mum.
We really enjoyed it.*

RAUL: It's time to leave. Thanks for letting me use your spare room, Mark.

MARK: Don't mention it.

RAUL: No, I really appreciate it. In fact, thanks for everything. You've done so much.

MARK: Really, it was a pleasure. I enjoyed having you here.

RAUL: In spite of Lucy?

MARK: In spite of Lucy.

RAUL: Thanks for being so good about it.

MARK: That's OK. I'm not sure it would ever have worked out between us. Come on. Let's go.

Leaving

Take care and have a safe journey!

MARK: Have you got everything? Passport?
Boarding card?

RAUL: Yep. It's all here.

MARK: Do you want something to read for the journey?

RAUL: Don't worry, I've got a book. They're calling your flight now.

MARK: Take care and have a safe journey.

RAUL: Thanks.

MARK: And don't forget to keep in touch!

RAUL: I won't. And thanks again Mark.
You've been a good friend.

MARK: You too. Bye! Come back again soon.

Goodbye!

There are many ways of saying goodbye. What you say depends on the occasion.

If the person leaving is going on a journey:

Goodbye! Have a safe journey!

Goodbye! Take care!

If the person leaving is moving somewhere or starting a new job:

Goodbye and good luck!

If you are not sure that you will meet again:

Goodbye! I hope we meet again soon. (formal)

Bye! See you again some time.

Bye! Come back soon!

If the situation is informal and you will be meeting again soon:

Bye! See you!

Bye! See you tomorrow/on Friday/next week.

Bye for now!

Cheers! (often between men)

A final word . . .

How did you get on? No doubt some parts seemed easy and other parts were new. If you look at the Index on the next few pages, you will find a list of all the useful expressions which were written in bold type in the conversations. At first it may seem like a lot to remember, but a good way of learning them is to write down what each expression means in your own language. Then you can ask a friend to test you by reading aloud the expressions in your language and seeing if you can remember them in English. Anyway, I hope that this book will help you to make some new friends while you're in Britain. Enjoy your stay!
